DAYS 1, 2 & 3

Deteema Springs Hwange National Park

With 108 mammal species and 470 species of birds, Hwange National Park is Zimbabwe's biggest reserve and a sanctuary for wild dogs—less than 7,000 of which remain in the wild. A safari with a Zimbabwe Professional Guide is profoundly educational. Guides here are among the best in the world—enduring a tough licensing process and three-year minimum apprenticeship under a senior guide. Deteema Springs is one of Hwange's most remote camps, both small and isolated so you get to take in the magnificence of this wilderness.

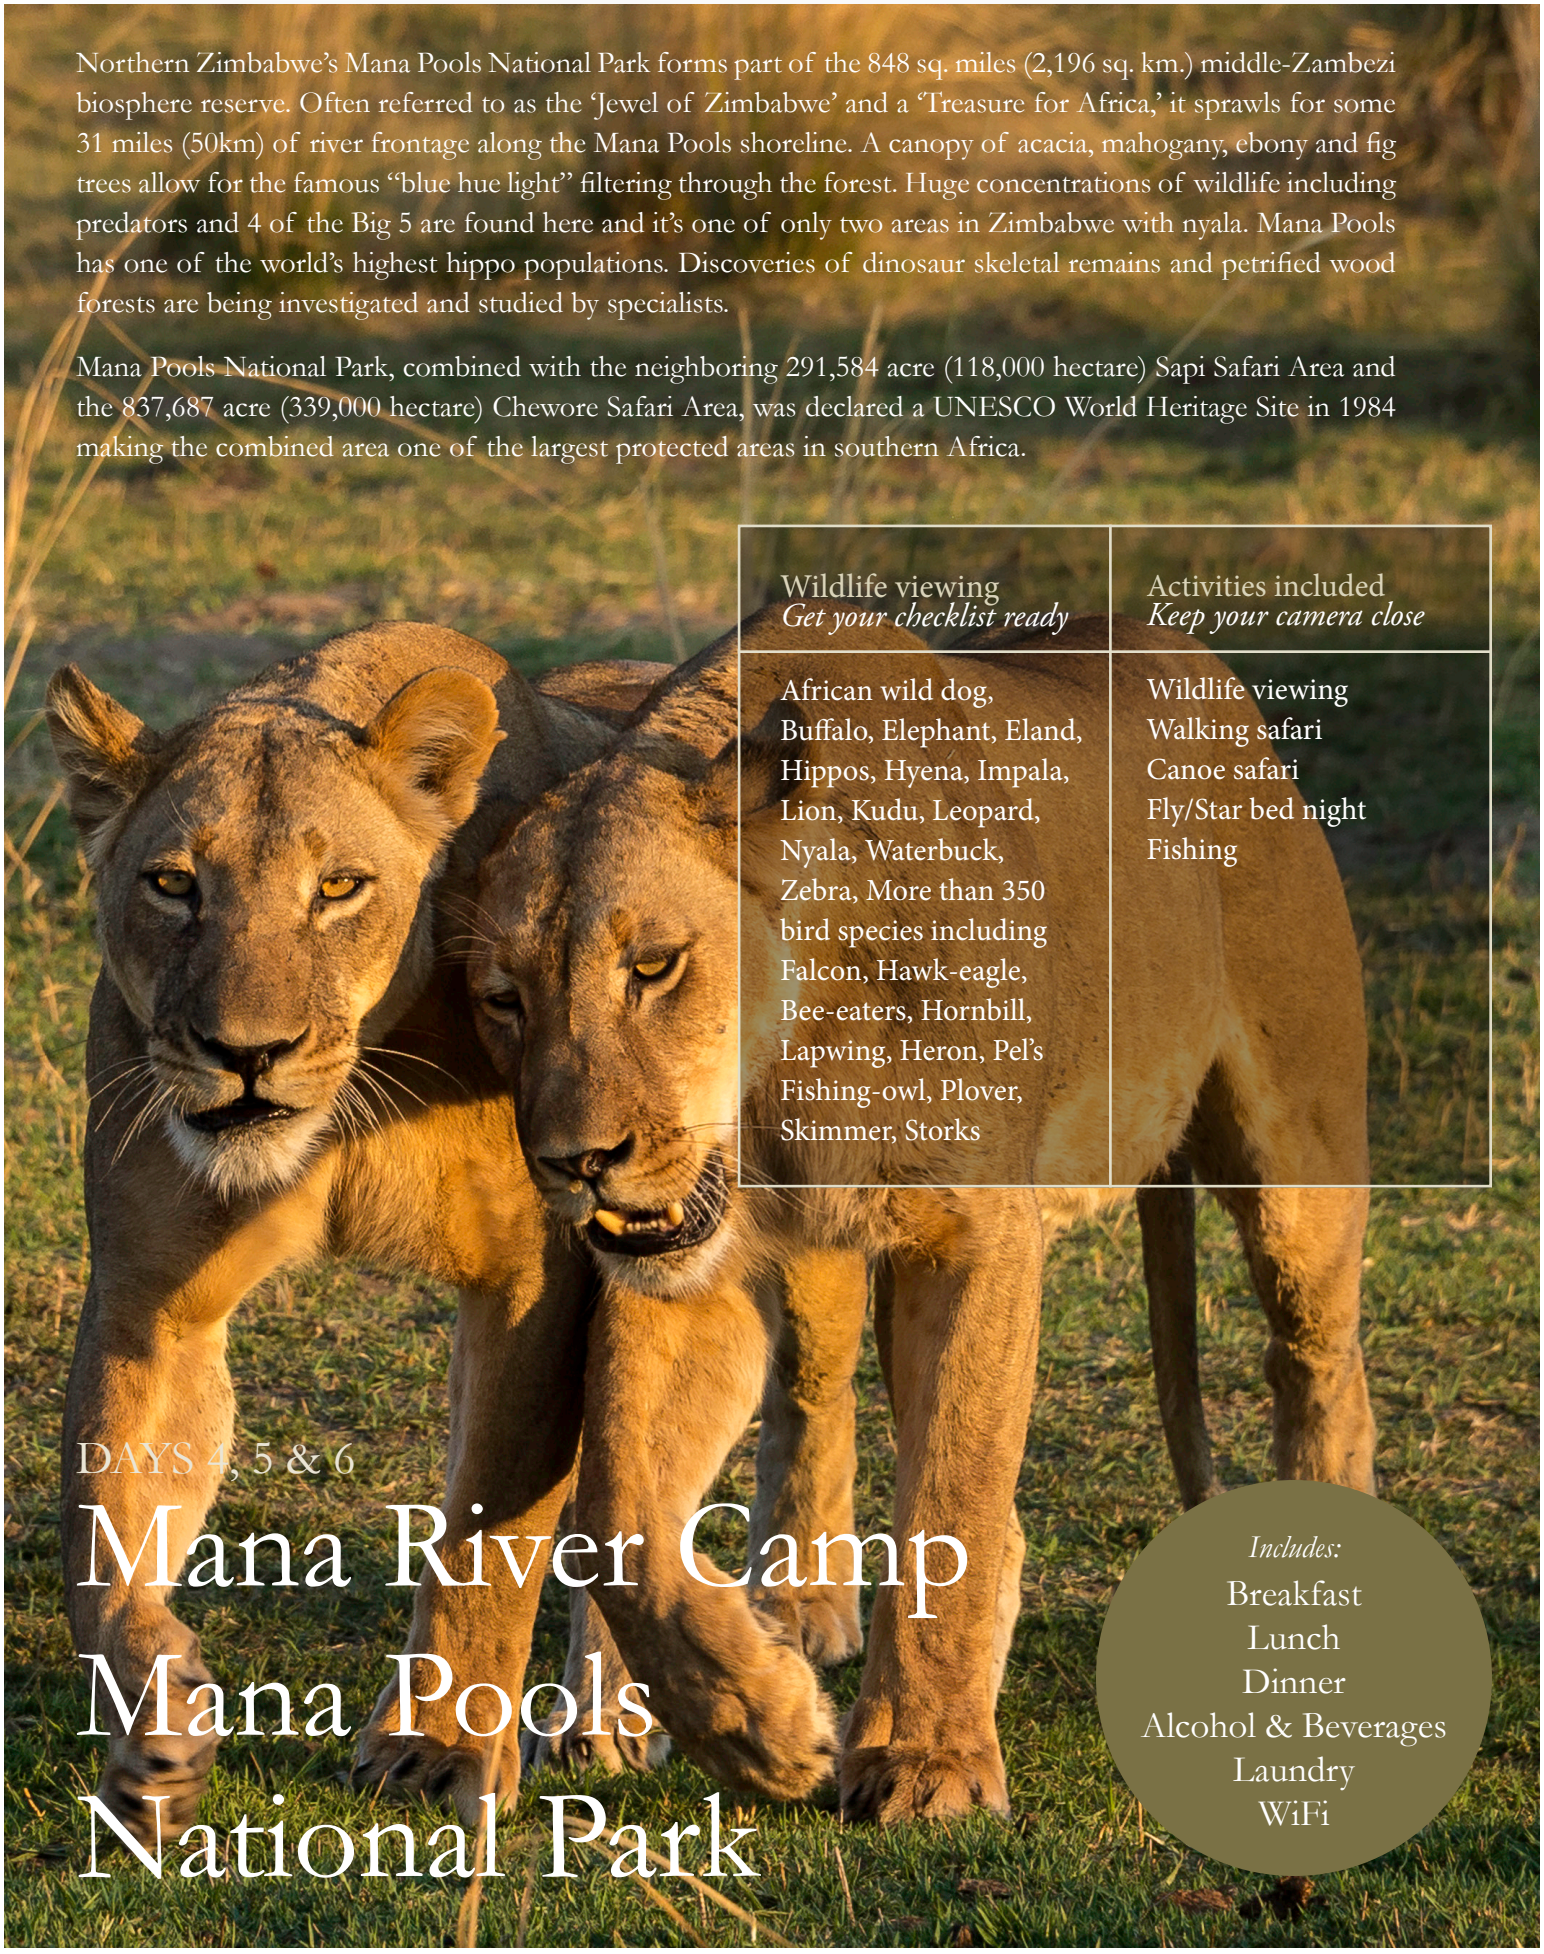
Zimbabwe Tourism Authority



Northern Zimbabwe's Mana Pools National Park forms part of the 848 sq. miles (2,196 sq. km.) middle-Zambezi biosphere reserve. Often referred to as the 'Jewel of Zimbabwe' and a 'Treasure for Africa,' it sprawls for some 31 miles (50km) of river frontage along the Mana Pools shoreline. A canopy of acacia, mahogany, ebony and fig trees allow for the famous "blue hue light" filtering through the forest. Huge concentrations of wildlife including predators and 4 of the Big 5 are found here and it's one of only two areas in Zimbabwe with nyala. Mana Pools has one of the world's highest hippo populations. Discoveries of dinosaur skeletal remains and petrified wood forests are being investigated and studied by specialists.

Mana Pools National Park, combined with the neighboring 291,584 acre (118,000 hectare) Sapi Safari Area and the 837,687 acre (339,000 hectare) Chewore Safari Area, was declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1984 making the combined area one of the largest protected areas in southern Africa.

Mana means 'four' in Shona, the local language.

It refers to the four large, permanent pools within the valley floodplains.

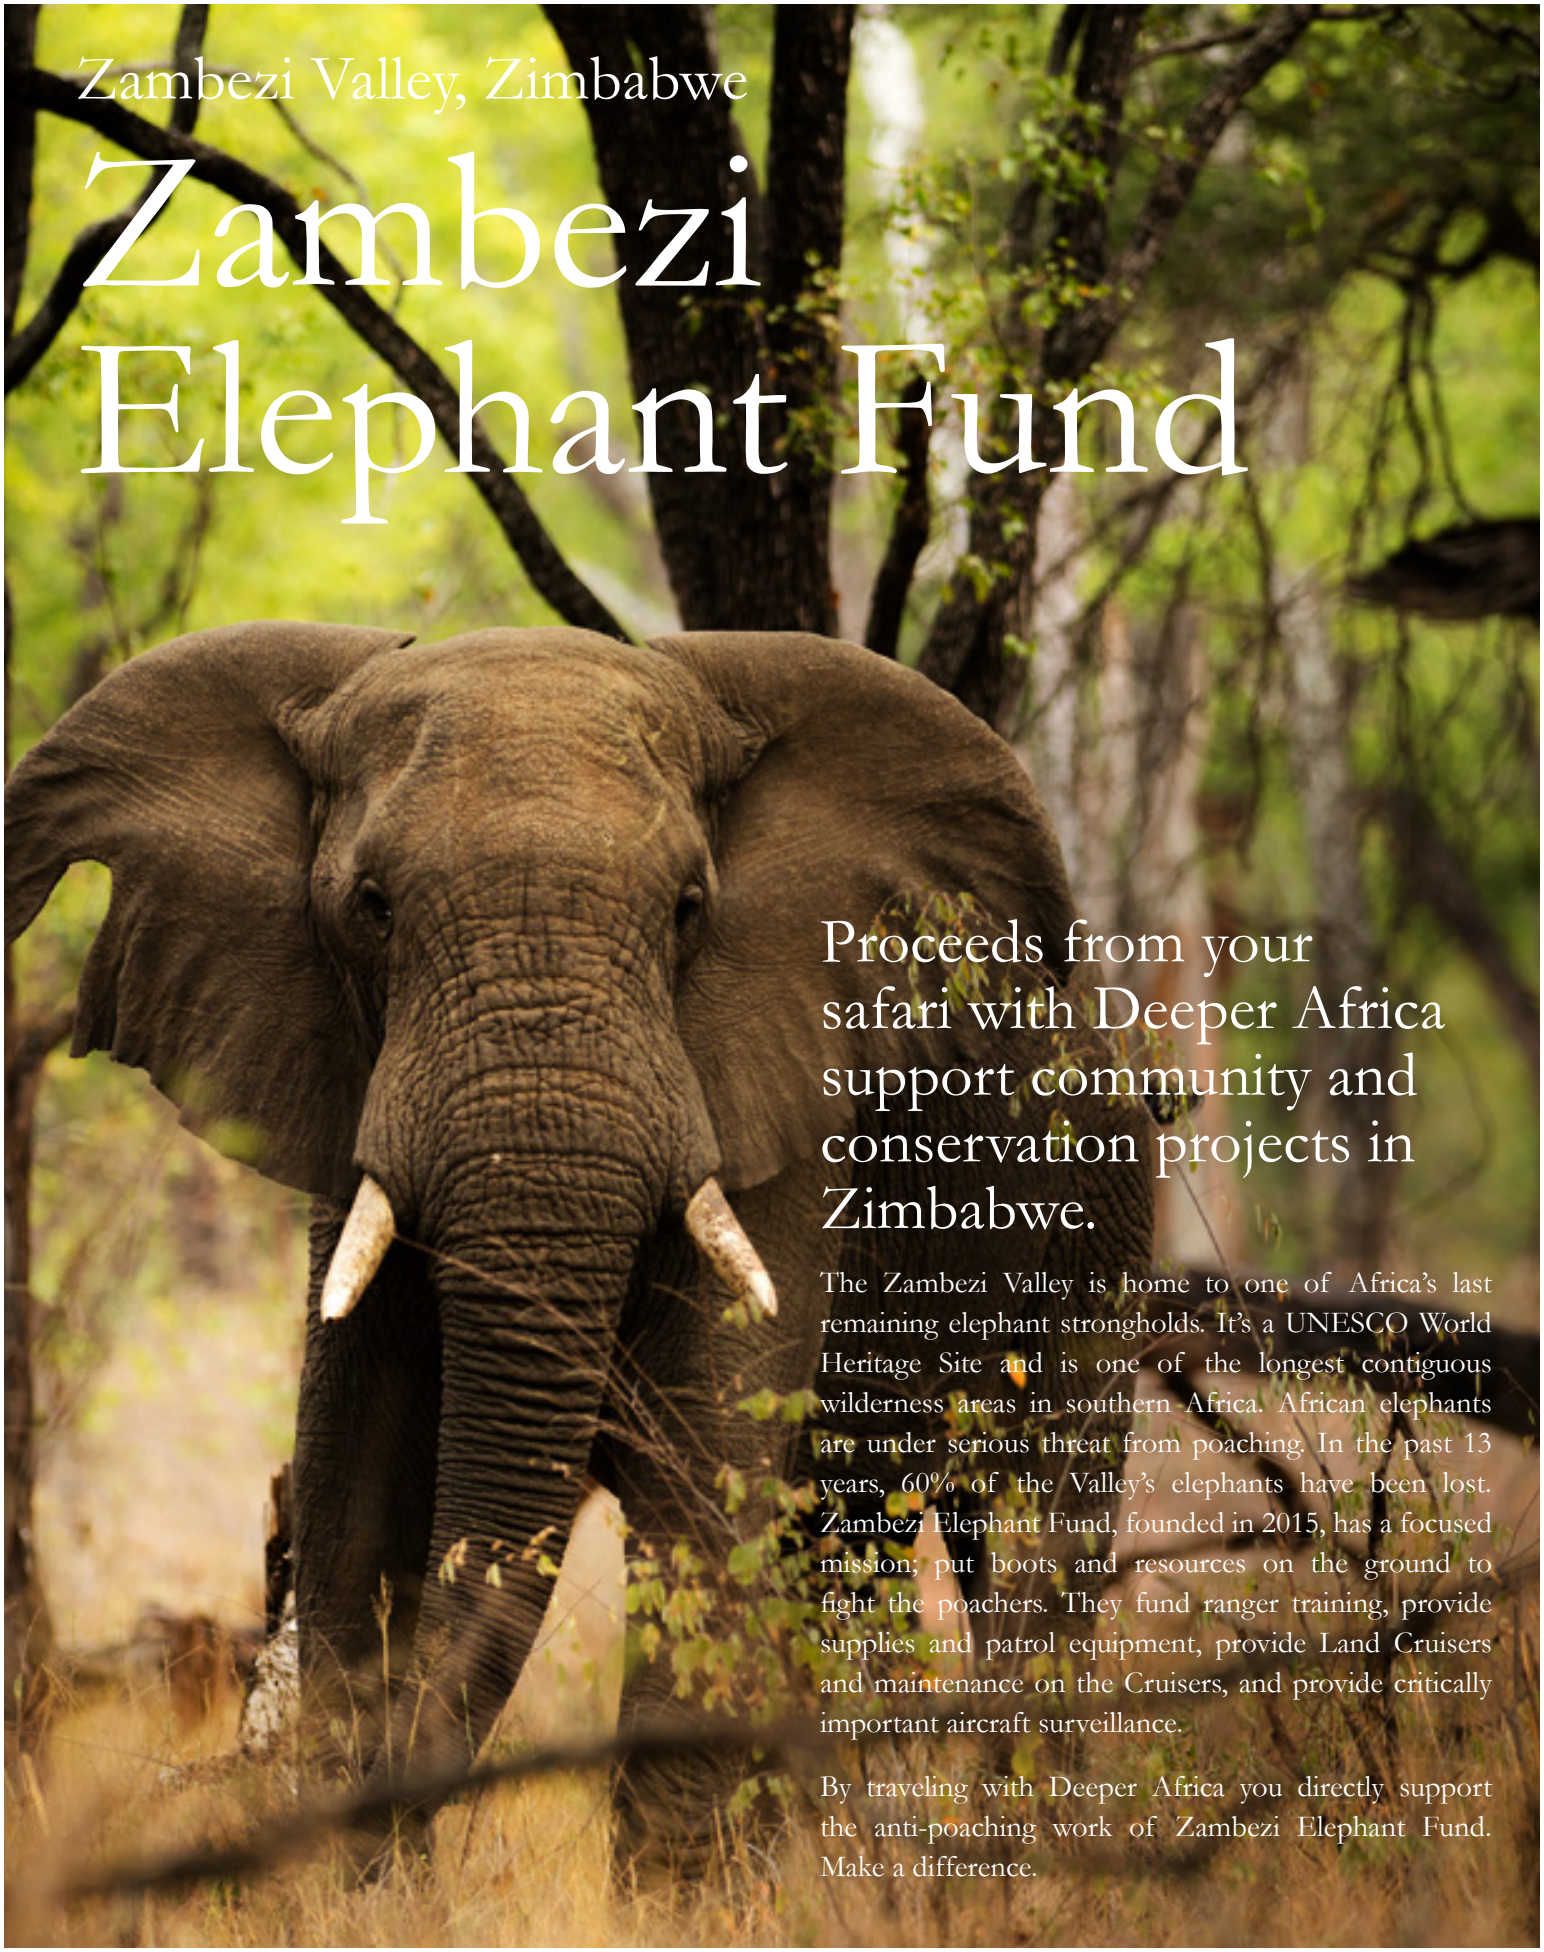
Zambezi Valley, Zimbabwe

Zambezi Elephant Fund



Proceeds from your safari with Deeper Africa support community and conservation projects in Zimbabwe.

The Zambezi Valley is home to one of Africa's last remaining elephant strongholds. It's a UNESCO World Heritage Site and is one of the longest contiguous wilderness areas in southern Africa. African elephants are under serious threat from poaching. In the past 13 years, 60% of the Valley's elephants have been lost. Zambezi Elephant Fund, founded in 2015, has a focused mission; put boots and resources on the ground to fight the poachers. They fund ranger training, provide supplies and patrol equipment, provide Land Cruisers and maintenance on the Cruisers, and provide critically important aircraft surveillance.

By traveling with Deeper Africa you directly support the anti-poaching work of Zambezi Elephant Fund. Make a difference.
