The Nature Reserve lies on the eastern edge of the Namib-Naukluft National Park, Africa's largest park. This is the world's oldest desert and one of its most beautiful. It's among the most photographed places in Namibia – a visual tapestry of colors and shapes. This is a vast treeless ecosystem of shifting sand between the interior escarpment and the Atlantic ocean, but with three distinct habitats—dunes and sandy plains, inselbergs and mountains, and gravel plains—each with its own dominant vegetation. Vegetation in this park is nurtured by morning mists that move across the desert with waves of cool air from the Benguela current out of Antarctica. It's a stark, austere beautiful environment.

Like all life in this austere environment, the oryx—Namibia's iconic animal—has adapted to survive. It's white coat reflects sunlight during the day, while its dark legs absorb heat during cold desert mornings. It digs succulent roots, bulbs and tubers, and eats wild melons for their water content. The water stored in these plants allows it to survive for days or even weeks without drinking water. Unlike other mammals, oryx raise their body temperature preventing perspiration during the day. It's nose has a specific network of capillaries that cools down the blood traveling to their brain. You'll be exploring adaptation at the edges of survivability in this amazing place.

The NamibRand is Africa's only International Dark Sky Reserve. Gaze up at one of the best skies on the planet.

DAYS 4 & 5

Desert Rhino Camp Palmwag Concession Damaraland

Journey inland in search of more desert adapted animals in Damaraland. Here the community profits from 1,111,935 acres (450,000 hectares) dedicated to wildlife conservation and protection of the critically endangered desert-adapted black rhino. The rhinos are protected by community trackers who patrol and protect their rhinos. Trekking is done on foot. The trackers start off early in the morning, locate the rhinos, and drive you as close as possible. From there, continue on foot winding into the rocky hills until you are minutes close to this prehistoric creature. The rolling ochre colored hills in this wilderness harbor Hartmann's mountain zebra, kudu, desert-adapted elephants, jackals, springbok, lion, leopard and klipspringers.

DEEPER NAMIBIA

Focused on monitoring, understanding and protecting the area's black rhino populations for 25 years,

Save the Rhino Trust

is a non-profit conservation organization funded by donations and partnerships. As rhinos in the area nearly went extinct, Save the Rhino Trust was formed to stop the indiscriminate hunting. The Trust employs community game scouts to help patrol and monitor rhino—many of whom ironically, were previously convicted poachers from within the local community. Trackers currently monitor more than 100 desert-adapted black rhino. The Trust is solely responsible for ensuring that rare, desert adapted black rhino survive and are relocated to other areas.

Desert Rhino Camp works in partnership with the Save the Rhino Trust, local communities and the Palmwag Conservancy to develop responsible tourism and support wildlife conservation in this region. A portion of every traveler's stay at Desert Rhino Camp goes to Save the Rhino Trust.

DAYS 6-8

Serra Cafema

Skeleton Coast

Kaokoveld

Journey into the far north to the edge of Namibia at the Kunene River. This is the border between Namibia and Angola and it is the only permanent source of water in the entire region creating an oasis of vegetation and palm trees along its banks. It sits in the 3,749,641 acres (303,400 hectares) Marienfluss Conservancy. This is a wild and lovely place. Water throughout this desert landscape comes from the early morning mists that flow in from the Atlantic Ocean. That morning dew is eagerly awaited by plants, animals, and insects before the sun burns it off.

Explore the moon-like landscape of one of the driest deserts in the world. View herds of gemsbok, springbok and Hartmann's mountain zebra and a large population of Nile crocodiles. Embark on a walking or boating safari and visit a Himba community, who are amongst the last semi-nomadic peoples on the planet.

Set on the banks of the Kunene River, Serra Cafema is one of the most remote camps in southern Africa.

Serra Cafema partners with the

Marienfluss Conservancy

which is owned primarily by the Himba people.

The 740,000 acre (300,000 hectare) Marienfluss Conservancy leases land to Serra Cafema for operation of the camp. A portion of every traveler's stay at Serra Cafema goes to the Conservancy. The Himba people own the Conservancy land and benefit from lease fees, employment & training. The Himbas are nomadic, moving from time to time into village sites near the camp. While you stay at Serra Cafema you can experience and interact with this traditional culture with the utmost respect for the Himba peoples.

DAYS 9 & 10

Little Ongava Camp Ongava Game Reserve Etosha National Park

This 74,000 acre (30,000 hectare) game reserve is well known for the conservation and research done in the conservancy and the white & black rhinos that are protected here. The conservancy expands the protected area of Etosha National Park. Etosha National Park takes its name from the world-famous Etosha Pan—one of a number of large, flat salt pans formed by the wind. Massive enough to be seen by astronauts in space, the pan is 100 million years old. Its edges host a variety of vegetation and great wildlife diversity—including the Big Five. Etosha's elephants have relatively small tusks due to dietary mineral deficiencies and genetic defects. This is one of the most important breeding grounds for greater and lesser flamingos in southern Africa.
