It is an ideal habitat for predators. Leopards, cheetahs and a healthy resident lion population stay year round. As do African wild dogs— Africa's most endangered large carnivore. The Botswana Predator Conservation Trust runs a research program here that focuses on African wild dogs. Fed by the Zambezi River system, it straddles the border between Zimbabwe and Zambia. The noise of the falls can be heard 25 miles (40 km) away. Embark on a sunset cruise along the waters of the Zambezi River. Watch for lurking crocodiles. Listen for hippos grunting and the distant rush of the falls. Take in the fiery night sky.

DAYS 9, 10 & 11

Somalisa Camp Hwange National Park

With 108 mammal species and 470 species of birds, Hwange National Park is Zimbabwe’s biggest reserve and a sanctuary for wild dogs—less than 7,000 of which remain in the wild. A safari with Zimbabwe Professional Safari Guide is profoundly educational. Guides here are among the best in the world—enduring a tough licensing process and three-year minimum apprenticeship under a senior guide. After studying natural sciences, current events and communication, they must pass a rigorous exam with a pass rate of less than 20 percent.

Meet with local communities including the inspirational women of Vukani Group and Thandanani Sewing Project and the researchers and anti-poaching unit at Long Shield Lion Guardians.

Solar-powered and with its own recycling and wastewater treatment, Somalisa Camp is the creation of Beks Ndlovu— safari guide, designer, entrepreneur and all-around Renaissance man.

Dete, Zimbabwe

Thandanani Sewing Project

Deeper Africa travelers contribute to the Thandanani Sewing Project, a micro-finance initiative in Dete, Zimbabwe and a community project supported through tourism, when staying at African Bush Camps in Zimbabwe.

The ten women in the Thandanani Sewing Project owned three sewing machines but had no funds for fabric. African Bush Camps Foundation loaned the money needed to start their business and assists them in marketing their handcrafted items to travelers visiting safari camps in Zimbabwe. Using locally-sourced textiles and recycled materials to produce high-quality crafts, jewelry and clothing, these dedicated women bring together their unique skills and resources to better the circumstances of their families.

Long Shield Lion Guardians

focuses on reducing human/wildlife conflict threatening all wild carnivores.

Sometimes a horn is more powerful than a gun.

When lions stray into a populated areas and attack livestock in rural communities, locals often retaliate by killing them. Hwange Lion Research Project, part of Oxford University's Wildlife Conservation Research Unit (WILDCRU), now employs and trains the local Long Shield Lion Guardians who serve as mediators between the communities and the wildlife. This courageous group of local men and women from the village of Dete, deploy drums and vuvuzela horns to keep the lions out of the villages and alert local herdsmen when a lion is near so that villagers have time to move livestock or scare the lion back to the park. WILDCRU'S Lion Research Project has radio-tracked more than 100 Hwange lions and their research assists Zimbabwe authorities with conservation strategies.

Meet the Guardians. See their methods and their newly invented lion-proof cattle pen.

Matobo Hills, a landscape of granite towers and sheltering caves, teems with wildlife and contains more than 200 species of trees. Home to people for 500,000 years and declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 2003, its ancient rock paintings, stone tools, pottery, oral traditions and shrines tell stories of hope, strife and spirituality.

Explore and climb the granite “whalebacks,” “castle kopjes,” and “balancing rocks” towering above the mahogany forest. Tour ancient rock art and track white and black rhino on foot with an expert guide.

Amalinda Lodge’s created from thatch and wood, are woven into the boulders and alcoves of a stone-age shelter and rock painting site.

Claiming the world’s highest concentration of rock art, Matobo houses at least 3,000 rock art sites—some more than 10,000 years old.

Paintings depict ancient San people dancing, running and hunting. Giraffes, elephants, antelopes and rhino running, feeding and playing are rendered in precise detail. Abstractions of shamanic visions are illustrated.

Mother Africa Trust

Matobo Hills, Zimbabwe

Since 2009, Mother Africa Trust has been working with Amalinda Lodge to build community infrastructure, such as classrooms, teachers colleges and waiting rooms for expecting mothers, as well as fund conservation initiatives and anti-poaching. The Trust has brought electricity into schools and clinics and is currently assisting in the construction of a new primary school in Matobos for 200 children that currently walk more than 5 miles to get to the nearest school. The Trust is also dedicated to improving the living conditions and sustainability of disadvantaged communities around Hwange National Park and Matobos by awarding college scholarships, bringing people together through sports and events, funding school field trips and environmental cleanup campaigns. During the drought of 2016, the Trust was able to feed 923 children a meal each day for 6 months, and has contributed immensely towards the Matobo Rhino fence project to help protect endangered rhinos.

Singita partners with

Malilangwe Trust

to restore and maintain the historic biodiversity of the Malilangwe Wildlife Reserve.

Singita's mission is to create harmony between wildlife conservation initiatives and community development. Having adopted a scientific approach dedicated to understanding the Malilangwe ecosystem, their conservation practices ensure that key ecological processes function naturally and that their footprint is as light as possible.

The goal of the Singita-Malilangwe community development program is to foster deep committed ties to local communities and to assist them in thriving both economically and socially. Examples of this are educating local children about conservation while taking them wildlife viewing, feeding breakfast to 19,000 local schoolchildren every day so that they may focus at school, providing irrigation to local subsistence farmers and funding university scholarships for local students.

Singita-Malilangwe's conservation program preserves cultural treasures, prevents wildlife poaching and promotes wildlife diversity—including the reintroduction and protection of endangered rhino populations.
