Trek and climb through the home of ten habituated gorilla groups. Watch them munch on bamboo shoots in this “land of a Thousand Hills” which includes five of the eight Virunga Volcanoes inside the national park boundaries. Your late afternoon can be spent relaxing at the lodge or getting out into the local villages to meet people.

Your final day has you returning into the forest to trek a different gorilla family, so you can observe the differences in the personalities of the gorillas due to a difference in family structure.

Gorilla Doctors

Critically endangered mountain gorillas are the only great apes whose wild populations are increasing, largely due to the work of Gorilla Doctors and the Mountain Gorilla Veterinary Project.

Gorilla Doctors provides medical care to ill and injured gorillas in Uganda's Bwindi Impenetrable Forest, Rwanda's Parc National des Volcans and the DRC's Virunga National Park. Veterinarians, rangers, guides and conservationists monitor each gorilla's health, note any developing problems and intervene in emergencies. Gorilla Doctors owns its own vet school.

This work has helped save the species from extinction and even contributed to a baby boom. We're happy to arrange a meeting with Gorilla Doctors for you after you trek, with the option to privately join the doctors on their rounds. This conservation success story demonstrates how your visit can change the future of an endangered species for the better.

Gorilla Porter Program

Porters are available to carry your daypack, water, and lunch. You may not feel you need one, but we recommend hiring a porter anyway.

$20 cost

$5 Gratuity recommendation

Porters are typically young people without many opportunities. They need work. They only get the opportunity to porter once a month. Typically, their other days are spent working on the family subsistence farm. That's essential work, but it doesn't help them with the cash and the learning they get from helping international guests. A porter doesn't just carry your gear. Like any good caddy, the porter gives you pro tips and shares the kind of local lore that will enlighten your adventure. They are familiar with the trails, terrain, and the condition of the forests.

The porter program is one of the initiatives that the gorilla rangers developed to build community support for mountain gorilla protection. The survival of gorillas and the welfare of local communities are inextricably linked. Support the people, as well as the primates. The money porters earn is one of the direct benefits of tourism in communities.

Hiring a porter is so much more than just lightening your load. It's important that all community members benefit from gorilla conservation through work and learning opportunities. They will make a hard trek possible by pulling and pushing you through; a much needed hand.

Parc' National des Volcans, created in 1925, is part of Africa's first national park.

Sufficient genetic differences exist between the gorillas in Parc' National des Volcans (Rwanda) and the gorillas in Bwindi Impenetrable Forest (Uganda) to suggest that these populations breed in isolation, even though the forests linked the two mountain ranges just 500 years ago.

Gorilla numbers are rising in both Uganda and Rwanda. This population increase is attributed to the quiet, yet steady presence of Gorilla Doctors, as well as improved census techniques.
